Colin Eggesfield talks making it in Hollywood, conquering cancer and his new chapter in Scottsdale

STYLING: ALISON BAILIN BATZ
PHOTOGRAPHY: JOSUE O. PHOTOGRAPHY
AGENT: MAXX MANAGEMENT/NTA TALENT

So Scottsdale! November '22

After small parts, including play-murder victim on Law & Order: Eggesfield got his first major break when he landed the role of the iconic Kane's son Josh Madden on All My Children in 2005. "In my time as Josh, the character got to crash an airplane, steal $20 million and even take his sister's girlfriend," Eggesfield says. "I even haunted a town's fictional town of Pine Valley as a villain. But none of that compared to what happened behind the scenes." Six months into his time on the soap, Eggesfield was diagnosed with testicular cancer. Despite aggressive treatment and a period where he was cancer-free, Eggesfield was diagnosed with cancer a second time a year later requiring another surgery. "While I never wish what I went through on anyone, that time in my life forced me to develop patience and practice having hope in the face of what would have been infinite sorrow," Eggesfield says. "That hope got me through multiple surgeries and years of scans, X-rays, radiation, and seemingly endless testing. It also gave me the courage to strike out again, both to seek more complex roles and to spread my volunteer wings by giving back to the medical community and those dealing with diagnosis like mine."

After departing All My Children in 2009, Eggesfield became a staple on television and in films (watch him in Something Borrowed opposite Kate Hudson and Backtrace alongside Sylvester Stallone, both available on Netflix now) as well as in the philanthropic community, notably with St. Jude's Children's Hospital, until he lost his father in 2016.
