WORKING, BUT NOT STIFF

Brit designer OLIVER SPENCER brings a sense of stylish ease to your daily uniform

● Oliver Spencer's trick isn't complicated, just perfectly executed. The designer takes the idea of the uniform—be it workwear or military—and tweaks it with interesting shapes and heavily textured fabrics, creating a flexible daily wardrobe for the creatively inclined. It's a strategy that's worked in his native UK and across the world, and it's about to get a major boost in the States, thanks to the brand's placement in five Nordstrom stores.

Spencer credits the "more style-conscious" American dressers out there. "They're thinking, 'What am I wearing?'" he explains. "I want to look put together but not too put together. I don't want labels all over the front of everything."

Fellow Brit Sam Lobban, the men's fashion VP of Nordstrom, saw the value for his shoppers. "Oliver's take... is a good complement to what we already do," he says. "You can still wear it dressed up, but it has a lived-in quality to it. That's always pretty important to our customer." —N. S.

TIE ONE ON

Ami's BELTED OVERCOAT is a more-than-worthy execution of the season's coziest outerwear flex

● If you've ever felt inclined to wear your bathrobe outdoors, you are not alone. Every weekend, on coffee runs across America, millions of men feel the same longing. But they don't have to, thanks to one cozy bit of seasonal outerwear: the belted overcoat. On one side of looking rather chic while you grab your morning paper, for designers, belted overcoats are a playground of texture and color. Here why we especially love this (very warm) one from Paris-based Alexandre Mattiussi's label, Ami.

It's supremely versatile
This is your perfect night-to-day piece. You can dress it up for an evening out, layering it with a jacket and trousers or jeans and a sweater, then throw it on over sweats and a tee to snare a bacon-egg-and-cheese the next morning. Who that handsome devil reflecting off the glass display cases? You, the coolest guy in the deli.

It's easy—and envy inspiring. Even down to its creamy beige color, there's no better way to bring #robelle to the streets. That other guy out walking his dog is going to wish he were belted up like you are. Go ahead and throw an extra breakfast sandwich in one, if for no other reason than because you can. —Ben Bookwala
